

Op-Art

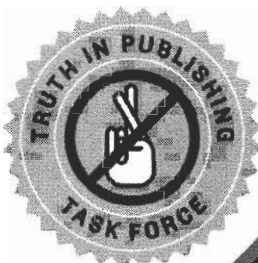

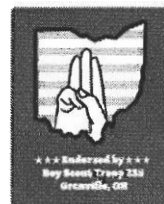

BARBARA GLAUBER

Judge a Book by Its Cover

As just about everyone in the Western world knows by now, future editions of James Frey's book, "A Million Little Pieces," will no longer carry that coveted Oprah's Book Club logo on the cover. Additionally, publishers are now debating how to better inform readers of the relative accuracy and truthfulness of memoirs and other nonfiction titles they distribute. Given the industry's, um, struggle with forthrightness, we've come up with a few suggestions.

Nonfiction Facts
Serving Size 356 pages Chapters per Volume 18
Amount Per Serving
Verifiable Details	75%
Exaggerations	9%
Embellishments	7%
Poetic License	2%
Fabrications	3%
Composite Characters	2%
Nonexistent Characters	1%
Misrepresentations	1%

DISCLAIMER: Some names and identifying characteristics have been changed. Some sequences and details of events have been changed. Some facts were manipulated on: Pages 9-12, 15-19, 78, 94-105, 122-123, 167, 184, 187-203, 257, 288, 295-312, 341 and 345. Some persons thanked on the acknowledgments page were of no help to the author.

