

The Department of Creative Writing Presents

Steve Jones

College Students on the 'Net: Uses and Social Meanings

Tuesday, February 21, 2006

12:00 - 1:30 PM

2412 HMNSS

Steve Jones is professor of communication at the University of Illinois, Chicago and Adjunct Research Professor in the Institute of Communications Research at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. The editor in chief of the Encyclopedia of New Media (Sage, 2003), he is author of Virtual Culture: Identity and Communication in Cybersociety, editor of Cybersociety 2.0 and Doing Internet Research; and coeditor of Society Online: The Internet in Context.

He has been using the internet since 1979 when he was using and co-authoring educational materials on the PLATO system. A social historian of communication technology, his research interests range from Internet technologies to audio technologies, Internet studies to popular music studies. His books have earned him critical acclaim and interviews in national and international media. Jones, co-founder of the Association of Internet Researchers, has made numerous presentations to scholarly and business groups about the Internet and social change and about the Internet's social and commercial uses. He is co-editor of New Media & Society, an international journal of research on new media, technology, and culture, and edits New Media Cultures, a series of books on culture and technology for Sage Publications, and Digital Formations, a series of books on new media for Peter Lang Publishers. He has provided Internet consulting services to numerous corporations and not-for-profit organizations, and serves as Senior Research Fellow at the Pew Internet & American Life Project.

