

The staff of Iron Horse Literary Review is proud to announce

The 2011 Discovered Voices Awards

In 2011/2012, Iron Horse Literary Review will publish one story, one essay, or three to four poems written by a graduate student currently enrolled in an AWP-affiliated program. The featured writer will be displayed prominently in the issue and will also receive $150 for first-serial publication rights and four free copies of the issue featuring his or her work. IHLR editors judges this competition.

Rules:

- Manuscripts must arrive with a nomination letter from the director/faculty member of the student's creative writing program.
- Each program may nominate only ONE student per genre: one in fiction, one in nonfiction, one in poetry. Multiple submissions from the same program will be automatically disqualified.
- Prose manuscripts should be no longer than 20 pages, double-spaced, one-inch margins, 12-point type; poetry manuscripts should include 3 to 5 poems but not more than 10 pages.
- Previously published manuscripts will not be considered.
- Simultaneous submissions will not be considered.
- Students enrolled in Texas Tech University's creative writing program will not be considered.
- All nominations must be postmarked by March 18th.
- Manuscripts should be sent to Iron Horse Literary Review, Discovered Voices Award, Department of English, Texas Tech University, MS 43091, Lubbock, TX 79409-3091. Make sure the envelope clearly says this is a nomination for the Discovered Voices Award.
- Please include the student's bio note, social security number, HOME address, and email address on a title/cover sheet, but do NOT place any identifying information on the manuscript itself.
- Questions should be directed to mail@ironhorsereview.com.
