Fellowship Overview

We are seeking a highly-motivated graduate or post-doc science-based researcher with a passion for applied science and technology-driven innovation to join the Larta team. This fellowship is designed for the science researcher looking to participate meaningfully in assisting with the transition of scientific or technical innovations to the marketplace. We are targeting those individuals who can work effectively in a virtual environment and for whom this meets their professional development objectives. In the course of the 6-9 month engagement, a Fellow will work on several projects, providing insights, doing market research, learning about the long road and pathways to commercialization. Larta’s professional team will benefit from this senior expertise. Candidate’s major areas of study and interests should align with our organizational mission and culture. Given Larta’s national and global reputation, body of knowledge and networks of influence, the Ideas, Energized Fellowship itself is an honor that should be considered a mark of excellence.

What will you do?

As a Fellow, you should be able to sift quickly through written material on the innovations we serve, write clear, non-technical summaries, analyze challenges in the sector or area of the science in question, and assist the team to address programmatic challenges. Excellent analytical, verbal/written communication and interpersonal skills are necessary. The Larta Fellow will provide strategic support to Larta’s programs and operational teams in the following ways:

What would my day look like during the Fellowship?

- Work on execution and continual improvement of programs with Larta’s science-based teams: Energy, Food and Agriculture (Sustainability) and the Life Sciences.
- Consult, as needed with operational areas of the organization, including IT and Marketing & Brand Strategy.
