Title:
“Contingencies, opportunities, calamities, and how career paths are shaped”

Abstract:
The path to permanent employment - and fulfillment - rarely is a straight or predictable line. At least, not in Entomology. Using myself as an example of someone who ended up where they are without really intending to, I hope to explore the sorts of things that one can and cannot control when trying to build a career. You have both more power, and less power, than you might think, and that can be a tricky lesson to learn.

Refreshments will be served in the Entomology Building Courtyard at 3:00pm
