

Proximity Media SUMMER 2024 Internship Application - Narrative Film & TV

Proximity Media (Judas and the Black Messiah, Space Jam: A New Legacy, Creed III) is a multi-media production company seeking highly-motivated, ambitious interns to support our narrative film & TV departments. This in-person position is ideal for those interested in pursuing careers as producers, writers, and/or executives — you must love reading, have strong analytical writing skills, and a passion for diverse & inclusive storytelling. Previous internship experience is preferred.

Responsibilities include script coverage, industry research, watching films, ad-hoc administrative support, special projects related to our slate and participation in company-wide staff meetings. Interns will have the opportunity to develop an original film or TV pitch to deliver to Proximity executives at the end of the internship, and also meet with industry professionals throughout the semester for wide-ranging insight into the filmmaking and development process.

The position is paid and begins in May and runs through late August. Interns will work from the Proximity offices in Burbank, CA two days a week, and one day from home. If you cannot be in Los Angeles for the duration of this internship please do not apply — we will have other remote opportunities in the future. Cover letters are encouraged. The deadline for the application is March 30th.

Note that we're currently only considering college juniors and seniors, as well as graduate students in their final year.

Interested candidates can apply via the following link:

Fiction Intern Application