

Professional Development Series

Join us as invited guests share their experiences and strategies for advancing and completing a dissertation project, and offer pro tips for grad students to better position themselves for competitive postgrad opportunities!

Thursday, May 27th, 1pm-2:30pm
Register in advance: <http://bit.ly/gsoe527>

Yasamin Bolourian

Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Graduate School of Education at the University of California, Riverside

Research: Innovation in professional development programs for educators, service pathways for autistic youth and their families in community and school settings, and postsecondary outcomes for neurodiverse students

Suneal Kolluri

Assistant Professor in the School of Teacher Education at San Diego State University

Research: Sociology of education, examining the ways in which pedagogies and school policies can expand postsecondary opportunities and elevate efforts for liberation in marginalized communities

Guillermo Ortega

Postdoctoral Fellow at Iowa State University and incoming Assistant Professor at Idaho State University

Research: Intercollegiate Athletics, College Athletes, Hispanic Serving Institutions (HSIs), Latina/o/x students, Qualitative and Quantitative Methods

Sasha M. Zeedyk

Assistant Professor of Child and Adolescent Studies at California State University, Fullerton

Research: Individuals with autism, specifically looking at their transition from adolescence into adulthood and college participation

GSOE's Professional Development Series is designed to provide support and tools to help GSOE students prepare and succeed in their chosen career. A mix of faculty, post-docs, administrators, and professionals will lead these panel discussions and learning sessions