

RIVERSIDE

School of Medicine

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL MEDICINE,
POPULATION, & PUBLIC HEALTH

SAVE THE DATE

The School of Medicine Department of Social Medicine, Population and Public Health (SMPPH) proudly welcomes faculty candidate:

Sean Arayasirikul, Ph.D.
Diversity Scholar ATN
NIAID New Innovators Recipient

Dr. Arayasirikul, PhD is a medical sociologist whose work is focused on two lines of health equity research: 1) the intersectional investigation of health disparities among sexual and gender minorities of color; and 2) the development of mobile health (mHealth) interventions and methods that employ innovative use of disruptive digital technologies and social media to identify, sample and engage vulnerable populations. Their research examines the impact of intersecting minority – sexual, gender, and racial/ethnic – identities and their corresponding forms of oppression (e.g. misogyny, trans-misogyny, homophobia, transphobia, and racism) on health and illness. Sean has published a qualitative study of trans-misogyny, an intersectional form of sexism that trans women experience and its interlocking microaggressions.

RESEARCH SEMINAR:

From Equity to Justice: Eliminating sexual and gender minority health disparities through intersectional, community-engaged public health and mHealth approaches

Friday, July 30, 2021

9:00 - 10:00 am
via Zoom

Click Here to Register