

Feels Like Home: Queer Placemaking & the Politics of Belonging in the Gentrifying Barrio

by Dr. Vicente Carrillo

President's & Andrew W. Mellon Postdoctoral Fellow

In this talk Dr. Carrillo draws from queer-feminist psychoanalytic frameworks and affective geographies to examine how queer Latinx communities negotiate belonging in gentrifying Boyle Heights, East L.A. By focusing on how spatial and emotional attachments to place emerge, he uses case studies like emerging queer Latino bars, and Chicane/Latine cultural productions to map the tensions between belonging and displacement.
