WHO WE ARE

Our Why

We exist because writing is how scholars think, learn, and lead. The RWSC helps students turn ideas into impact—so they can clarify complex arguments, enter academic conversations with confidence, and share work that serves their community. Strong writing and research skills expand access to opportunities, support persistence to graduation, and prepare students for meaningful lives. That’s why we offer personalized, inclusive support: to build agency, amplify diverse voices, and make scholarship a tool for self-expression, civic engagement, and positive change at every stage of the writing journey.

Our Services

At the RWSC, we’re here to help you move your writing forward. Stop by for one-on-one tutoring—by appointment or drop-in—at any stage, in person or online. Join our monthly, peer-led Writing Circles for grad students. We also run interactive workshops on specific skills and genres throughout the quarter, available in-person and hybrid. Faculty can partner with us to design tailored, course-aligned workshops, often with extra-credit options. Additionally, we now proudly host the SOE Research Conference to showcase student and faculty scholarship.

THANK YOU FOR ATTENDING OUR

THIRD ANNUAL

SOE Research Conference

The RWSC is beyond happy with the success of this year's SOE Research Conference.

We hope that all in attendance were able to enjoy the complimentary breakfast and lunch; listen to our amazing guest speaker, Jessica T. DeCuir-Gunby; and hear from the hardworking individuals who presented their work after months of research.

We are extremely grateful for the audience we received at this year's conference, who devoted their time to attend. Through this conference, we aimed to highlight the unique individuals found in UCR's School of Education, and we believe that this conference served as an opportunity to come together as a community. We look forward to seeing everyone again next year!
